Hi Paul,

The bike patrol is heading over there now to talk to the Marines and get more information about the criminal activity. They will keep an eye out for the suspect for everyone's safety.

Thank you,

Michael Russell

Good morning,

We've been consistently having issues with a gentleman in the attachment harassing myself and my Marines in our office. He'll come by ring the buzzer until someone answers it and tear our posters off the wall. We called the police and made a report on Saturday 10th around 1.00 pm. He came by again this morning pressing the buzzer when I asked him to stop he left but then came back then saying he was going to "blow this place up!" and that he was going to kill us. I again told him to leave and let him know that we were going to be calling the police. The police arrived about 25 minutes later took the report then left.

They stayed around the area for a little while before leaving unable to get the individual. Around 11:00 a.m. he came back looking through the windows when I came out once again he left. I understand he's sick but when we have applicants and their parents in and this happens it puts us in a bad situation. I would like to see if we could have security possibly patrol more outside of our office to prevents future issues. I've CC'd my chain of command so they're aware of what's happening. If you have any recommendations we're open for them, thank you.

Very Respectfully,

Gunnery Sergeant David A. Dew
